

What is the Financial Supports Commission?

The Financial Supports Commission is a part of UCLA's student government that addresses issues of affordability within the student community. Working on educating, reaching out and researching to make the student body financially literate. Heather Rosen, is the 2014-2015 Financial Supports Commissioner. Rosen is the leader of the Financial Supports Office and leads her team to work on financial research, education and outreach to the general student body. Rosen knows that affordability is every student's number one priority so that is why it is hers too. Rosen is a Financial Supports Commissioner driven to help students with the cost of higher education.

As a facet of the Financial Supports Commission, the Business Outreach Council works with local companies to increase business from UCLA students. Our goal is improve accessibility to discounts for college students on a budget. This year we have been working towards growing the number of companies who offer students these discounts. We want to give students the opportunity to experience the market right in their backyard without exhausting their wallets
